Local Government Professionals Australia announces new National President

13 May, 2016

Local Government Professionals Australia is very pleased to announce Andrew Wardlaw as our new president.

The general manager at Burnie City Council, Andrew takes on this additional role as president for the next 12 months, after having served on the LG Professionals Australia board since 2011.

‘By working with the professionals who run local government all around the country, LGPA strives to ensure members are on the forefront of change and innovation in communities’, Andrew said. ‘The ultimate goal is to make communities better. I am looking forward to the challenge of leading local government professionals over the next 12 months.’

A hearty thanks also to our outgoing president, Shayne Silcox, who had this to say: ‘Andrew has been very much involved in all the initiatives undertaken this last year. His leadership style is inclusive and results driven – the transition will be seamless.’
